N°7

What makes something fascinating? What makes you stop and look twice? Wonder? Reconsider?

In this issue, we explore the power of juxtaposition, of mixing the industrial with the natural, the surreal with the real, shadow and light, texture and colour. We create tension through contrast and open up new ways of seeing things that once seemed familiar.

LOVE & ENGAGEMENT

AT TIFFANY, WE BELIEVE IN THE PROMISE OF LOVE. A FEW WORDS ON THE TOPIC HERE.

ANNIVERSARY NIGHT

I remember the slanting rain against our window

The scent of shea butter on the pillows

I remember our houseplants were so alive.

And I thought with wonder

How I had never so easily shared silences

How I had never felt so fully known.

Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie

THE GUY IN THE AUSTRIAN SKI ADS BY JOYCE WADLER

There are people who sneer at high school crushes but I never do and that is because of me and Horst and Sandy and Mr. Breitenberger, the coolest teacher in upstate New York.

Sandy is in love with Mr. Breitenberger who is very old, perhaps 29, and married. I am in love with Horst, who looks like the guy in the Austrian ski ads and doesn't say much and has a girlfriend. Why I love Horst I cannot tell you. You love who you love, it's in the hard drive, although I couldn't have said that at the time. It was 1964; before personal computers. The best we could do was dream our fuzzy, inexplicit fantasies and scribble in our notebooks:
Horst, Horst, Horst.

And for Sandy, the nickname all the students used:
Mr. B., Mr. B., Mr. B.

We graduate, we separate. I go to New York City and become a reporter, Sandy becomes a teacher and marries, Mr. Breitenberger goes up a ladder to fix his roof and falls and is paralyzed for life. What happens to Horst I do not know. I have boyfriends who love me back, the one who existed as fantasy evaporates.

Years pass. Then, one day, I get a call from Sandy, whose marriage has broken up, suggesting we drive upstate and visit Mr. Breitenberger. They have kept in touch. She now calls him by his first name, Bert. Mr. Breitenberger's marriage is also ending. It is 22 years since high school graduation, Mr. Breitenberger is in a wheelchair, but when we leave Sandy is as giddy as when we were teenagers. Three years later, Sandy and Mr. Breitenberger get married.

I live with men and break up with men and start getting senior discounts at the movies. When

I get the call that Mr. Breitenberger has died there is no one in my life. A few weeks after the funeral, Sandy calls.

"Bert always wanted to go up in a hot air balloon but we couldn't do it because of the wheelchair," she tells me. "But Horst—remember Horst? He's living in Vermont now—is a hot air balloon pilot and we're going to scatter Bert's ashes over the Hudson. Will you come with us?"

I haven't thought about Horst for over 40 years, but the old feelings start coming back.

"Horst?" I say and Sandy laughs.

"Horst is no longer Horst," she says. "He's fat, he's got a beard, he looks like an old hippie."

I meet them at a park, where Horst is taking schoolchildren on balloon rides. He no longer looks like an Austrian ski pro, he's carrying fifty extra pounds. But now he talks and now he smiles and whatever was the essential Horst must still be there because I feel just the way I felt in high school.

There is a photo of us from that meeting just before the balloon starts to rise, me looking at Horst who has one gloved hand on the burner, Horst finally looking back. They're followed by photos in which we stand closer together and more trips; San Miguel, the mountains of Washington State, the balloon festivals of the North East. The years we have together are not merely happy, they are ecstatic.

That's how I know: If you love somebody at 16, you will love them at 60. You love who you love, it is in the hard-wiring, there is nothing you can do about it, although I could not have told you that at the time.

MAIRA KALMAN

BELIEVE IN LOVE

Hugs Not Hugs

Were I to tell you I love Hugh

You'd likely think that I said "you."

Freaked out you'd say, "I like you too."

But I don't mean you, I mean Hugh.

Why can't I love a Phil or Keith,

An all too easy Cliff or Heath?

To simplify, I x'd a letter,

Then added one to make it better.

It's Hugs I love so very much,

The person though, and not the touch.

Embraces irk me to the core

Except from Hugs who I adore.

BACKSTORY

TIFFANY CHIEF ARTISTIC OFFICER,
REED KRAKOFF, ON GREENHOUSES AND
THE POWER OF CREATIVITY.

The greenhouse, for most gardeners, is a utilitarian space that provides shelter and allows life to flourish in light and warmth. We decided to take this functional structure and recontextualise it for our spring Home & Accessories collection. We built it from solid sterling silver to make it fantastical, extraordinarily luxurious and even a bit magical. It took four of our finest craftspeople over 1,000 hours over the course of nine months to engineer it in our Tiffany hollowware shop. The proportions, the structure and the materials were all painstakingly considered. What we ended up with is a perfect expression of the consummate craftsmanship and ability to dream that Tiffany has always been known for. But what I love most about this piece is what it symbolises. A greenhouse, if you think about it, is a place where beauty grows and flowers blossom, with scents and colours that are almost unfathomable. I like to think that Tiffany does, and has always done, the same for the imagination, creating and nurturing unpredictable magic and constant surprise.
